Digital Journalism Course

The Knight Center for Journalism in the Americas, based at the University of Texas at Austin, in collaboration with the ACM, will be conducting Journalism 2.0 - an online course on Digital Journalism.

This is the most recent project of an ongoing collaboration between the Knight Center and the ACM. We have in the past received very favourable responses from participants in courses offered.

The course begins on Monday March 3, 2008 and will run for five weeks to April 4, 2008. It is open to all English-speaking Caribbean journalists.

Prospective participants must have a minimum three years experience in the media and have access to high-speed internet service, a digital camera and digital audio recorder.

There is also a registration fee of US$30 payable to the ACM. This payment includes ACM membership dues and you will be issued a Regional Media Pass at the end of the course of study, together with a Certificate for successful completion.

You may apply immediately to acmmail@gmail.com with ATTN: JOURNALISM 2.0 in the subject line. The application deadline is Monday February 18, 2008 and confirmations will be announced on Friday February 22, 2008.

The course will be conducted and supervised by Mark Briggs, author of Journalism 2.0 How to Survive and Thrive.

It will cover the following areas:

Introduction to Digital Journalism

- Blogs
- RSS Feeds
- Planning for multi-media stories
- Gathering of digital audio and photos

No more than 25 participants will be accepted for the course.
